SLUGLINE:	Being 20, Despaired Palestinian Job Hunter
HEADLINE:	Miras al-Azza graduated with a BA in Media and Journalism from Al-Quds/Abu Dis University. He still couldn't find a job in media because the number of graduates in the West Bank is high comparing to the number of the vacancies. His story highlights the issue of unemployment in the West Bank. Miras dreams of a better reality and he's trying hard to create his opportunity in this competitive atmosphere.
DATELINE:	Bethlehem, Palestine - 23/01/2018
SCRIPT:	My name is Miras Al-Azza from Aida Camp. I'm originally from Beit Jibreen. I was graduated last year with a BA in Media and Journalism from Al-Quds University of Abu Dis. Until nowadays I have been looking for a job. I've been getting training in many local media agencies and I've been volunteering with many organizations on various activities in order to make a good network and get a job. Not only in media field there's lack of opportunities, I believe in all fields we can't find enough job opportunities. Of course I have to financially depend on my family, so it's very embarrassing to me to ask my father to give me money at this age. I apply for jobs almost every day but I never get any replies from the organizations I

	apply for. They should at least reply! My advice to the young people is that they should get experience before they even graduate, so that when they graduate they will have enough experience that will make it easy for them to find a job.
