Event - Reem Abu Laban

The Palestinian government, after years of economic dependence on Israel and associated with the Paris Economic Agreement, found itself faced with an option that might hint at an economic breakout through a national currency

The euro currency has not gained global status until now, but its monetary mass is somewhat low, although it is stronger than the rest of the currencies." This is confirmed by the "economic .event" economist Nasr Abdel Karim

The best option is to link the Palestinian pound to the dollar and not the euro, because all countries deal with the dollar. However, the imports and exports from abroad to Palestine are " .mostly in dollars. They make up two-thirds of the world's money, As in the euro

As for the stability of the euro, he said: "There is always uncertainty about the ability of the euro to consolidate, and specifically after the global financial crisis, in 2008, where the infection of the crisis to European countries (Greece, Spain, Italy), and they almost declared " .bankruptcy Lula Intervention of the International Fund and led by Germany

Abdul Karim said in his speech that there are some European countries that seek separation and disintegration, and this affects negatively the strength of the economy in Europe (ie the .economy) and support the euro currency

The European Union has not talked about linking the Palestinian pound to the euro as an option proposed by the government alongside other currencies, according to EU spokesman in Palestine Shadi Osman. He pointed out that the Union usually studies the economic reality .and its essence before resorting to any step

Economic expert Abdul Karim said that the economic relations between Palestine and the European Union are still limited, although Europe is the biggest supporter of the Palestinian .Authority
