SYNOPSIS:	Nassim KHAIRI is a young Moroccan in his twenties, who decided to encounter the Novel Coronavirus in his proper way in order to serve the community in KSAR EL KEBIR, a small town in the north of Morocco, by engaging himself in shopping and delivering food and medicine for ill people and the elderly. The authorities have announced the health emergency in the country in march 20th and this decision led to a number of people losing their jobs. Nassim used to work in a clothing store and after the corona virus had sparked in the town, he found himself without any job, so he decided to work with his motorcycle in delivery services and serve vulnerable people for free. The delivery man suffers from asthma and this fact has not stopped him from continuing his noble mission. He talks to himself in a daily monologue The virus could infect me at any moment. Maybe I should stop here, but many people are waiting for me to help them. Nassim is living amid a conflict and thinking always about his family and his health issue. He tries to disconnect from those ideas and focus on preventing himself with a high sensibility toward the Novel coronavirus. He considers his new work not just a resource of an income but a humanitarian responsibility toward old and ill people who have no one to help them in this tough times.
